Celebrating National Rural Transit Day: Connecting Communities Across Georgia

Author: Jailyrn Bellford

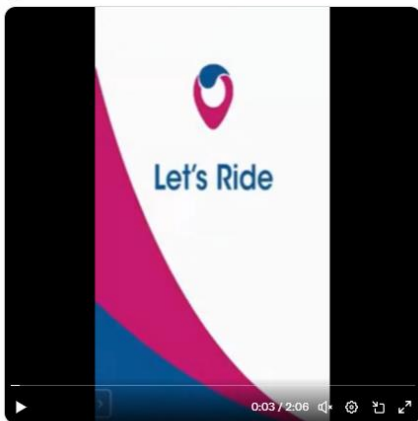

Imagine it's early in the morning and you're preparing for a day at work or school. You have your morning coffee or bowl of cereal, gather your things, and head for the door. As you walk closer to your car, you notice a flat tire. You bewilderingly glance at your watch- there's no time for this! You frantically think of your options. Walking isn't an option because your destination is too far away. Maybe you could catch a bus in the next town. How would you get to the bus stop? You could call your neighbor to see if you can carpool, but she's already left for work. Seeing no other option, you call your boss or school to explain your

Governor Brian P. Kemp @GovKemp · Jul 13

Thankful to the @GDOTSoutheast team for their quick and effective work in reopening a major artery of our transportation network!

Their efforts have helped shorten any disruption to the flow of business and tourism in this busy area as families travel for the summer.

ASCE Report Card

Georgia Infrastructure Grades

AVIATION	BRIDGES	DAMS
DRINKING WATER	ENERGY	PUBLIC PARKS
PORTS	RAIL	ROADS

Georgia's 125,000-mile road network continues to move travelers and goods well between origins and destinations throughout the state. Road infrastructure has benefited from the Transportation Investment Act of 2012 and the Transportation Funding Act of 2015, with the state gas tax increasing automatically with inflation. Georgia ranked 6th-best among states for road conditions in 2023. 67 percent of interstate roads are in good condition – seven percentage points higher than in 2019. Despite this progress, Georgia still faces congestion in major corridors and must move more people and goods in all travel modes, specifically around Atlanta and Savannah. In addition, roads have become less safe. 1,982 road users lost their lives in 2022, 33 percent higher than 2019. The total included 339 pedestrians. Decision-makers can improve traffic safety on Georgia roads with road diets, “complete streets” engineering, and multimodal investments.
